Sediment in Wine Tartrate Crystals

Tartrate Crystals are also called "winnatural product of the wine, and form e diamonds". They are a when the wine gets too cold. It is in essence cream of tartar, forming because of the temperature change. Think of sugar turning into rock candy and you'll have a good mental image. They're completely harmless, and quite natural. The problem, of course, is with appearances

Deep straw in colour this Light racy Late Harvest offers delicate aromas of gingered honey and fresh cut pears. A seamless integration of tropical fruit, pears and fresh honey is nicely balanced with good supporting acidity. Gentle in the palate this wine can be sipped on its own or may be a delicious "finale" to a special meal.

Fruit winemaking can create delicious wines based on fresh local produce. In other cases, though, fruit is a legitimate first choice as winemakers bring out the delicious essence of the natural berries, apples, pears, and other raw materials used.

In fact, Blackberry , Cranberry and Blueberry wines are full of antioxidants and are in some ways healthier for you than red wines.

Passion Fruit "unique" @ Isabella Winery.
